To Whom It May Concern:

My name is Anna Bodily. I am a first year acting major at Utah State University. To help with the transition to college I signed up for the orientation class called Connections. We met for a week before school started, and once a week for three weeks during first semester. Molly Cameron served as my Peer Mentor. She was everything I could have asked for and more.

Molly contacted us before the class started to give us an idea of what we were getting into. She didn't just stop there though. She asked me what I was interested in at the University, and responded quickly with how I could get involved in those things. She let everyone know exactly what was expected before the class started, and helped us if we had any questions.

When class started she was always there early helping the professor set up his lesson, or teaching a section on her own. She served as a great go-between from the terrified new students to the daunting new professor. By the end of the week we all felt comfortable around her and the professor. Molly maintained a professional atmosphere and a friendly decorum, which is a delicate and impressive balance.

After class had ended Molly continued checking in with the students. She held open office hours were we could come talk to her about any of our concerns or successes. She also sent us weekly emails with motivational ideas, study tips, and events happening on-campus and throughout the town. Just because the class was over did not mean Molly was going to leave us in the dirt, and I really appreciated her for it.

Sincerely,
